DAILY
THE UNION

THE PRESIDENT.

HIS CONDITION YESTERDAY VERY ENCOURAGING.

Two Bites of Beef Steak Chewed and the Juice Swallowed—He wants to be Moved from the White House.

[illegible] DISPATCH TO THE [illegible]. EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 31.—8:30 A. M.—The president passed a tranquil night, and this morning his condition is quite as favorable as yesterday at the same hour; pulse [illegible], temperature [illegible], respiration 18.

Noon Bulletin.

12:30 P. M.—At the dressing the [illegible] the parotid swelling was found to be discharging freely. It was well and has materially diminished in size. His general [illegible] remains in about the same state. His general condition is evidently more favorable than at this hour yesterday. Pulse 95, temperature [illegible], respiration 17.

Very Encouraging.

[illegible] to Lowell: The president's condition is very encouraging to-day. His pulse is down to 95, lower than it has been for several weeks. Temperature and respiration normal. No adverse symptoms apparent at this hour, 2 P. M.

Doing very Well.

In an interview at 2:45 P. M. Dr. Bliss said the president's condition is highly satisfactory and that he is making very favorable progress in every way. The parotid swelling has been reduced two-thirds its maximum size and is steadily diminishing. The president continues to take food well and has made a slight gain in strength. The question of his removal from the executive mansion is again being seriously considered. The president himself wishes to go to Mentor, but although he will doubtless be taken there eventually, the first removal will be a shorter distance. It will take place at the earliest possible moment. The patient's pulse at noon went down to 95 for the first time since the 5th of August, and is still below 100, with all other symptoms correspondingly favorable.

Able to Chew Steak.

[illegible] P. M.—Dr. Reyburn reports that the president has had a very favorable afternoon. He ate a plate full of soup about 3 o'clock and has twice to-day chewed small pieces of beefsteak and swallowed the juice. There is no material change in pulse or temperature, and all symptoms continue favorable.

Very Hopeful Feeling.

The surgeons regard the president's condition this morning with increased satisfaction and encouragement. The parotid swelling steadily improves in appearance and the president in all other respects gained ground slightly in the past two days, and is having a quiet, comfortable day. Among members of the cabinet and the president's personal friends there is a genuine feeling of encouragement and confidence, and there seems to be a general impression that by Saturday or Sunday, when the glandular swelling shall have ceased to be a hindrance, the patient will enter a stage of convalescence. Postmaster-General James called at the executive mansion this morning, but upon receiving the bulletin at the door, said, "that's good enough; I'll go to the department and get to work," and he drove away without coming up stairs. MacVeagh expects to return to Philadelphia this afternoon.

Blaine to Lowell.

4:30 P. M.—The president had less fever this evening than upon any previous evening since he was wounded. The temperature at 6 o'clock was normal. His entire day has been most encouraging in all his symptoms. Hereafter I shall send but one report daily.

General Statement of the Case.

Dr. Bliss said to-day: I received a number of letters to-day commenting favorably upon our use of alcoholic stimulants in this case, but the writers never having seen the patient, are not qualified to judge as to the wisdom of the measures which we have taken, during the recent period of exhaustion. Any reduction in the quantity of whisky given, was followed promptly by warning of danger in the shape of high fever and fluctuating pulse. It was largely by stimulation that he was kept up during the worst stages of glandular inflammation.

Since the evening bulletin the pulse has fallen again to 104. Dr. Reyburn says no importance whatever should be attached to the fact mentioned in the 6:30 bulletin that the gland has made an opening spontaneously into the mouth. No pus found its way to this opening, and it is not likely any will, for the reason that it can escape much more easily through the external outlet. The opening into the mouth is about the middle of the cheek and in the position in which the patient lies most of the time to-day the lower three external openings lower down which drain all the pus from the part of the gland with which the mouth is in communication. No danger whatever of any kind is apprehended from this new feature of glandular suppuration.

6:30 P. M.—The president has passed a better day than for some time past, has taken his food with increased relish and the usual afternoon rise of temperature did not occur. At the evening dressing the fluid used to wash out the parotid abscess found its way into the mouth, which it did not do this morning, showing that an opening into the mouth has spontaneously occurred. The abscess is discharging freely, and the swelling continues diminishing. There is some increase in the discharge of pus from the wound. Pulse 100, temperature [illegible], respiration 18.

11:30 P. M.—At this hour, 11:30, the president's pulse is nearly down again to 100, temperature and respiration normal and condition satisfactory as at any time during the day.

Talk of a Trip on the Tallapoosa.

The doctors do not regard as at all unsatisfactory the new opening into the mouth and attach no importance whatever to it. After the 6 P. M. bulletin the pulse receded slightly. Everything considered he could not be better at this time. The president this morning recurred to his desire to be removed. Physicians had been discussing this point and were unanimous that at the earliest moment possible the president should be removed. Dr. Bliss told the president he would be removed as soon as it would be safe. Bliss said he could not promise to take the president to the place of his great desire, his home at Mentor, before a shorter journey was taken. The doctors say while the matter of removal is again under earnest discussion there has been no decision as to the objective point. Capt. Henry, after canvassing the matter at the White House has come to the decision that a trip down the river on the Tallapoosa will be the first change, in case the president recovers sufficiently, of which no doubt is now expressed. The Tallapoosa will arrive here to-morrow and very likely be detained to await the president's recuperation. The only sign that strength is being renewed is that the president in being turned over on his side to dress the wound, he both this morning and evening assisted in a slight measure in the turning movement.

The Pistol.

After the president was shot, the revolver used by Guiteau was taken by District Attorney Corkhill from the police headquarters. A complaint was made by the police that the chain of evidence had been broken, as the officer who had taken the pistol from the assassin, and who according to custom should have kept possession of it, could not now identify it. A movement is now being made to get it from Corkhill, who holds that the pistol was fully identified on the morning of the shooting in court, and that the district commissioners are only courting a little absurd notoriety in trying to get it.

Smoked "Colorado Claro."

A dispute having arisen as to whether the president smoked the very strongest cigars, his doctor says he has always got the mildest brand for fifteen years.

Mrs. Garfield to Garfield's Mother.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—Mrs. Garfield wrote to her mother-in-law Aug. 23: Slowly but very steadily James is coming up from this trouble with his stomach. I begin to wonder what can happen next and whether there is any lower note in the scale for him to touch; but if there is I shall not despair and you must not. His strong constitution and superabundant vitality I believe will carry him through. I begin to see how little I knew of the trouble attending such a wound. It seemed to me that when he got through the first week and then the second, so well that it must be plain sailing. I can now understand why the surgeons were never ready to say that the dangers were all passed. They would say that they thought they were, etc. It has been a strange disappointing summer, but if we all come through alive and well I shall not complain.

The President as a Christian.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Rev. F. D. Power, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian church of this city, has written a letter concerning the president's character as a christian man, in which he says, "He never hesitated when it was necessary to testify to his faith. He has lectured publicly on 'The Christian Church,' within two years on 'Evidences of Christian Religion,' and has for six years been a devout and constant worshiper and communicant. When taken into estimate the temptations attendant upon such a career, the general looseness of Washington life and political life, and especially the marked unfaithfulness of christian men when they attain such prominence in official position and the extreme poverty and obscurity of his brethren in Washington, together with their poor house of worship, I esteem him as an unusual christian man, faithful when nine out of ten would have failed."

The Variation and Frequency of the Pulse.

Within the limits of health there may be considerable variation in the frequency of the pulse, the number of pulses per minute differing with age, sex, stature, muscular action, mental action, the state of the digestive process, and the time of day. The average frequency per minute is approximately indicated by the following table given by Carpenter:

Pulse in the newly born infant	[illegible]
Pulse during 1st year	115 to 130
Pulse during 2d year	[illegible] to 115
Pulse during 3d year	[illegible]
Pulse during 7th to 14th year	[illegible]
Pulse during 14th to 21st year	75 to 85
Pulse during 21st to 60th year	70 to 75
In old age	[illegible]

In inflammatory [illegible] the pulse may [illegible] in the child [illegible] muscular exertion, mental excitement, [illegible] the pulse, and [illegible] in the morning [illegible] sleep and [illegible].

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—At the Russo-Greek chapel, corner of Powell street and Montgomery avenue, beautiful and impressive services were held yesterday afternoon, consisting of the hymn and prayers for the recovery of President Garfield. Bishop Nestor officiated. There was a good attendance of Russian and American citizens. The Russian consul and secretary were present in full uniform but it was noticeable that not a single representative of the U. S. military, naval or civil service or of the state or municipal government were present.

Sierraville Destroyed by Fire.

TRUCKEE, Aug. 31.—A dispatch from Sierraville, Sierra county, says a fire originated in the store of J. Olsen at 5:15 P. M. today. The whole town is destroyed. Losses will reach at least $50,000. At the present moment the store of Nichols & Co. is burning inside and about fifty kegs of powder are stored therein. A heavy explosion is momentarily expected. Within ten minutes after the alarm was given the whole town was ablaze. A two year old child of S. P. Barton was burned to death.

Reached San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 31.—The track of the California Southern crossed the P. C. S. S. Co's wharf at the foot of Fifth street this afternoon and the locomotive was greeted with enthusiasm by a large crowd as it came up to the passenger depot there. Track laying progresses rapidly and the line will be at the crossing of the San Diego river within the next five days.

Fighting Outlawry.

TOMBSTONE, A. T., Aug. 30.—No confirmation of the reported massacre at Eureka. At Benson the people are organized to stop the bunko business. Justice Mundel has appointed twenty constables who are backed by all citizens. All bunko men now in Tucson are attending the Feast of St. Augustine. The people are organizing for protection against marauding cow boys. The country will soon be too hot to hold them.

White Villains.

BENSON, Aug. 31.—There is reason to believe that there were a number of white men in the band of savages who made the recent raid in which George Daly was killed. This is inferred from the language used by some of them, also from appreciation shown by them for specie and bank notes.

Small-pox Investigation at Seattle.

SEATTLE, Aug. 31.—The grand jury is now in session and is making an investigation in the case of Davis, who was recently brought here from San Francisco on the Dakota suffering from a malignant type of small-pox and who died shortly after at Newcastle. Dr. Jackson of Victoria refused to appear and testify in the matter, which probably will make it difficult to indict the guilty parties. Dr. Minor in charge of the marine hospital at Port Townsend, and Dr. Gale of Newcastle yesterday obtained the following statement from Thomas, now in the pest house: "I came up on the steamer Dakota on the same trip with Davis; did not get acquainted with him till the vessel had been out three days; he claimed to be seasick, and stayed in the room of the fellow who is up nights looking after things, he paid four dollars for the use of the room; when the steamer reached Port Townsend I do not know where he was; saw him one hour after leaving Townsend; he [illegible] and wanted a drink of water; he had to pay the waiter for everything that he got, he was charged two dollars and fifty cents for a slice of water melon and fifty cents for a cup of tea, etc.; do not think Captain Morse knew about it, nor do I think the steerage steward knew about it." Davis left the steamer on her arrival at Seattle and went to a hotel, where he remained till the train came, and was taken to the depot in the hotel coach.

GRANT AS A "FAST" MAN.

He has become more Dashing in Dress and more Talkative than before.

[Long Branch Letter in the Atlanta Constitution.]

Every day about 4 o'clock General Grant comes dashing along Ocean avenue behind a fine team of bays that draws his heavy T cart. Ordinarily he drives alone; sometimes his son Ulysses is with him, and occasionally one sees Richard J. Dobbins, who owns half of the Branch and plenty of Philadelphia as well, in the seat beside him. Grant is now in the financial vortex. He haunts Wall street, although not as a general speculator, talks stocks and Mexican railroad prospects continually, has become brusque in manner, more dashing in dress and more talkative than ever before. Sometimes he wears a blue necktie with a red dot in it, and occasionally I notice the plaid pattern of his trousers is very large and so square and sensational as to effect. They say he is making money. George W. Childs, the owner of the Philadelphia Ledger and one of the biggest-hearted, most generous souls that ever existed, says that Grant came back from his trip around the world comparatively a poor man, in fact. Now, however, he is worth a clear three-quarters of a million, made in conservative stock speculations, in which he was guided, and is yet, by Jay Gould. Grant has a nice time at Long Branch. His cottage adjoins that of Mr. Childs, is near Gen. Horace Porter's, is a few lots distant from Pullman's (the palace car man), is only across the ocean drive from Daniel Dougherty's (he's the man who nominated Hancock), and is surrounded by the homes of others who make the neighborhood as distinguished by the eminence of its residents as they do delightful by the sociability of their intercourse. The general goes to New York every day, leaving on the 7:30 train and going by boat from Sandy Hook, returning the same way, leaving New York at 4. He remains the lion of the Branch notwithstanding the counter attraction of Jay Gould, who lives up toward Atlantic village about three miles from Grant's cottage, toward the north. Gould, however, is rarely seen. Sometimes a glimpse of him may be had as one whirls along Ocean avenue, as he rocks himself in a red chair in a vine-shaded corner of the veranda of his splendid cottage. Again at dusk there is sometimes a clatter of hoofs and rattle of wheels on the avenue and as a splendid team of blacks dart by one catches sight of a solitary figure on the high box seat.

Merchant Marine Tonnage.

[Chicago Tribune.]

A Norwegian statistician named Kiaer has made up some curious and interesting figures in regard to the merchant marine of the world. He aggregates the entire tonnage of the sea, counting one ton of steam vessels as equal to three of sailing vessels, to be [illegible] tons, of which Great Britain controls [illegible], or more than one-half. The tonnage owned in twenty of the leading ports, omitting vessels of less than fifty tons is as follows:

Liverpool	[illegible]	Boston & Charlestown	[illegible]
London	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

The Arkansaw Kind.

[Detroit Free Press.]

"Speakin' 'bout the Arkansaw ager," said the man with the sandy goatee and squint eyes as he leaned back in his chair, "that's what you saw my heart-strings, in case I've got any left to saw on."

"Did you ever live there?"

"Did I? Well, I reckon I sort o' existed in them parts goin' on thirteen years."

"And you had the ague?"

"Had it? Why, I wallered in it. Gentlemen, gaze on me!"

The crowd gazed.

"When I moved down into Arkansaw from Tennessee risin' of sixteen y'ars ago, I was purty—I was for a fact. I had a dozen skule-marms in love with me, and hung me up if every gal in the ball-room wouldn't break her neck fur the honor of dancin' with me. Yes, I was purty, and I was good. I was so purty that children cried fur me, and so good that I was taken fur a preacher on more'n a hundred occashuns. What' has my purty gone? What's my goodness? Gone! Why, I've got to be the infernalest alligator in the hull swamp, and I'm growin' meaner at the rate of a mile a day! Fact—solemn fact, and that cantankerous ager is to blame for the hull of it. I've got a squint to my eyes, my nose has bin driven back an inch, and what teeth I've got left I have to be wedged in every Sunday with pine pegs or I'd swallow 'em. Purty! Why the sight of my phiz down in St. Louis killed a Texas steer dead'n a door-nail, and I was tryin' to look handsome at that!"

"You said you had the ague."

"Said so! Do you 'spose all the other calamities in this hull kentry could have busted me up this way? You bet I had 'er! I struggled with 'er right along fur 'leven straight y'ars without a letup. Gentlemen, let me harrer your souls with a few timely remarks. Your Michigan ager is a grasshopper, and one dose of Sy-neen knocks 'er dead. Out in Illinoy the ager is bigger—about like a squirrel. In Missouri she's about the size of a woodchuck, and when she strikes down into Arkansaw she's a wolf three feet high, seven feet long, and built to take hold like a thousand buzzards. Great shakes! but what travels I've had with that 'ere critter! Say, did ye ever ride in a one-hoss wagin over a stone quarry? Was ye ever seated on a [illegible] a hurricane movin' at the rate of six miles a minute? Did ye ever have a cyclone pick ye up and mop ye over forty acres of river bottom, wallop ye through ten acres of woods and wipe ye out to knock down a hundred acres of cane brake? Well, that hain't the ager—not the Arkansaw kind, its only the first faint preliminaries."

"I hain't long to live, and I don't keer to stretch this thing any. Tell'n the truth has allus bin my strong pint, and allus will be. Maybe you'll git some idea of the Arkansaw ager when I tell ye that I once [illegible] both shoulders in shakin', and it was a light shake at that. When I had one of my regular double-back-action shakes I could [illegible] a jug of whisky out of the [illegible] twenty eight rods off. Nobody dast pile up cordwood within half a mile of my cabin, and that's a solemn fact. I've [illegible] my ky been just as you cut corn beef, to [illegible] hull system [illegible] and so bitter that a [illegible] snuff of my leg couldn't git the pucker out of his mouth inside of ten days. Gentlemen, I don't want to prolong this agony. My father's yell—Fust I [illegible] I'll jump the river and [illegible] Arkansaw [illegible] and when I get thar I'd harrer yer souls [illegible] Weeks. We [illegible] I will then seek a few [illegible]."

RAILWAY SCHEME.

Plans of the [illegible]

[illegible] United States and Canada. The company has full power to build a bridge over the St. Lawrence. The capital stock of the company is authorized to be increased to $20,000 per mile upon the entire length of the railway. It is the intention of the company to make a through connection from St. John to the railway system of the northwest. The objective points on the Atlantic coast will be St. John, New York and Boston. Starting at St. John over the European and North American, a short road is to be built to connect this system with the International or "Pope" road, which runs from Lake Megantic to Lennoxville. Then a short gap of twenty miles is to be filled to Magog, from Magog to Waterloo to the south shore of the St. Lawrence over the Central Vermont or Southeastern, thence over the proposed bridge to Montreal. From Montreal westward [illegible] and [illegible] falls and the proposed [illegible] road, which will certainly be constructed under the auspices of the Atlantic & Northwestern company. From this point the line will be continued to a connection with the Canadian Pacific railroad and to Toronto by the Ontario end of the road. So great a number of roads are now interested in this through road that its construction is an absolute certainty. The construction of a new bridge will soon be commenced, and when it is completed it will be the first and most important step to freeing the city of Montreal from the monopoly of the Grand Trunk Co.

A CONFEDERATE CHRISTMAS.

The Hard Lines of the Rebels in the Winter of '64.

Christmas day, 1864, was the confederate Christmas par excellence. Outside supplies of all kinds had disappeared, and whatever comforts were provided were of home manufacture. The confederate dollar was now worth just two cents in gold, and flour was $500 a barrel, sugar was $30 a pound, salt $5, butter $20 and beef $5 to $10 a pound. Wood sold at $[illegible] a cord, and coal was not to be had save in a few of the cities, owing to scarcity of transportation. The day was Sunday, which in itself, would have tempered the usual merriment. At a country residence below Richmond, not far from the lines of the contending armies, a party of seven ladies and gentlemen all in the strictest southern sense of the term were assembled at dinner. The mansion had been proverbial for its hospitality before the war. Now, the welcome was as cordial as ever, but the board was spread in accordance with the necessities of the times.

At the head of the table was placed a large [illegible] worth $[illegible], at the foot was the last turkey the farm could boast, worth $[illegible]. The vegetables consisted of [illegible]

[illegible] From the windows of the mansion, thin light clouds of smoke could be seen rising from the camp fires on the lines, and now and then the dull thud of a heavy gun would break the stillness of the scene, and a heavy cloud would rise over the trees' tops and melt away in the air.

On the lines the veterans of many a hard-fought field were watching their antagonists with sleepless vigilance, some on duty in the works and others gathered about their fires toasting bits of army pork, roasting potatoes or trying to bake corn bread in the ashes, and recalling memories of home and other days when Christmas was not wont to wear so stern a look and life was easier, and the land was at peace. Even then, amid the ruins of a falling cause, these stout hearts cherished high hopes that the next Yuletide would see them safely at home once more, happy and peaceful under the bright folds of the flag they had fought so well to uphold—hopes that were destined to perish ere the grass of another spring should be green.—*J. ANCIENT MILLIONAIRES.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Thousands of men have envied Astor, Stewart, Vanderbilt, Mackey, Keene, Gould and the other fellows who can buy strawberries at $1 per box; but the richest of them are mere vagrants when compared to some of the ancients. There was Ninus, for instance. He was the son of Nimrod, the old hunter, who made lions scratch for holes and tigers take to ditches. Old Nim left his boy about £150,000,000 in cash, besides 120,000 cattle, a piece of land about as big as Arkansas and 14,000 likely slaves. There were no lawyers in those days who made a specialty of breaking wills, and young Ninus quietly took possession and cast about for some plan to keep himself out of the poorhouse.

He was considered a poor young man, and had he been seen lugging his girl to an ice cream saloon or riding out in a livery rig his friends would have said he would bring up in a garret. By a lucky capture of territory from the Assyrians, together with 20,000 slaves, 125,000 cattle, ten wagon loads of silver and jewels, and a few other trifles, Ninus walked up the social ladder and big bugs asked after his wife and babies and he could lose three games of billiards without wondering if the owner of the saloon would take a "stand off." He was worth £[illegible] when he died, and yet for the last five years of his life he went without mutton because the price had raised to 3 cents per pound.

The heiress with a $50,000 bank account considers herself some pumpkins, but what a three cent piece she would have been alongside of Queen Semiramis. She had not only the [illegible] left by Ninus, but in ten years she had increased it fourfold. Just multiply £[illegible] by two, and you have the amount of her bank balance, to say nothing of jewels and clothing, and furniture and palaces, and slaves and cattle. Had she [illegible] out and cleaned up she could have drawn her little check for about £750,000,000. She didn't worry about where her spring bonnet was to come from, and when a new style of dress came out she didn't sit up nights for fear some neighbor would secure a pattern first. While she made it lively for her enemies she was soft on her friends. She gave her waiting maid [illegible] a lump for dressing her hair in a new style, and she [illegible]

Mr. Smith of Cedarville is the largest farmer in the [illegible] the only man who raises grain for export. The average yield of his wheat fields last year was a little above twenty five bushels per acre, and the total product was two thousand bushels. With the exception of some thousand bushels ground at the little tone mill this grain, with half as much oats, was hauled thirty miles over a rough road to Tumwater at Olympia by hard work, making two trips per week. This is farming under difficulties, but in spite of them Mr. Smith makes money. He [illegible] of the very best farmer [illegible], has a large thresher, and enjoys all in his own fields. There are in the valley two other threshers which do a profitable business in [illegible] around. As soon as this valley has an outlet it will become valuable and rich. Compared with the broad fields of the Willamette, with the rich alluvial bottoms of the Lewis river in Southwestern Washington, the soil is not first class but, like the [illegible], is not the best in the world [illegible] good enough."

Nearly every farmer in the valley has a few rows of trees and a few have larger orchards, but generally but little attention is paid to fruit growing and trees are neglected and yield poorly.

[illegible]

For general farming business the lower Chehalis valley has good but not extraordinary resources, and [illegible]

While on the river I met Mr. George H. Emerson of San Francisco, a mill man connected with Simpson Bros., who had been prospecting the country with the purpose of putting in a mill. Viewing the situation from a practical standpoint, he considered that the bay, even in the face of the obstacles enumerated, offered fair inducements to enterprise. The cost of building a sawmill is no small matter even in a favorable situation, but in a wilderness where even the lumber for foundations and the first necessary buildings must be imported, where there are no aids or conveniences whatever is a tremendous work. A mill of 70,000 feet daily capacity, before it is ready to saw a stick, represents an outlay of not much less than $100,000. Although the supply of timber near at hand is great, a mill owned outside of the Pope & Talbot interest would have mainly to depend upon the upper Chehalis as its source of timber supply.

The forests along the bay are mostly spruce, but there are also great areas of cedar. Cedar is the only wood now in use throughout the country and the two or three little mills saw no other kind. It is used for building, fences and in fact for all purposes to which wood is applied. The forests are extensive and generally of good quality.

NAVIGATION SCHEMES.

In a former letter I referred to a scheme on foot to establish a new mail, passenger and freight line from Astoria to Olympia. The trip now requires five days, passengers leaving Astoria Tuesday morning and arriving at Olympia Saturday afternoon. By the proposed new route of travel the time will be reduced nearly one half. The wharf at Ilwaco will be extended to deep water in Baker's bay so that boats can [illegible]. Transfer over the portage to [illegible] Shoalwater bay will be [illegible] and the "[illegible]," a new boat, will connect with [illegible] at North Cove. [illegible] the passage will be made from Astoria to Peterson's Point. From here a steamer, which is now [illegible], will take passengers to Montesano, 35 miles, and from here to Olympia over the [illegible] the distance is a little less than one day's journey. The mail route from Montesano to Olympia follows the Chehalis river [illegible] postoffices and two days are required to make the trip. Under the new arrangement the trip will be easy and [illegible], and persons whose business is not urgent and who want variety and a smell of the ocean will take this route in preference to the rapid one via Kalama. The cost will be but a small advance upon the rail road fares.

Another scheme of navigation is brewing which will do much to develop the Grays harbor country. Mr. J. S. Hatch of Portland is having built at the Astoria shipyard a steam schooner, 115 feet keel, 27 feet beam and 11 feet hold, with a carrying capacity of 300 tons and accommodations for fifty passengers, which, when completed, in about two months, will do a general coasting business with all points between the straits of Fuca and Coos bay. This vessel is the first ever built at Portland under the American Lloyds and she will be first class every way and A 1 for ten years. Capt. Jas. [illegible], well known along the coast, will command the new craft. She will make regular calls into Grays harbor [illegible]

ed by a series of detached redoubts strengthened by abatis and field works mounted with cannon. Gloucester point, on the other side of the river, was also strongly fortified. In the latter part of September the combined American and French forces effected a junction with Lafayette at Williamsburg, whence, under the command of Washington, they marched on the 28th to the investment of Yorktown. The whole besieging force amounted to about 16,000 men, of whom 7000 were French and the remainder continentals and militia. The British abandoned their outworks at the approach of the allies, and on the 30th the investment of the town was completed. On October 9 the first parallel was established, and several heavy batteries opened with great effect upon the enemy, dismounting a number of their guns, and destroying on the night of the 10th a frigate and three large transports. On the 11th the second parallel was opened; but as the working parties were greatly annoyed by an enfilading fire from two redoubts, a bold and successful attack was made upon them on the night of the 14th by two detachments, one American and one French, and the captured works were included in the parallel. The French loss in killed and wounded was nearly 100; that of the Americans was much less. The position of Cornwallis now became exceedingly critical, cut off from receiving reinforcements, or from escaping by sea, by the presence of the French fleet of 37 ships under DeGrasse in Chesapeake bay. He made a sortie on the 16th, which proved a complete failure. On the 17th he proposed to capitulate, and the terms having been arranged, he surrendered on the 19th his whole force, consisting of 7247 regular troops, 840 sailors and 106 guns.

COMMERCIAL RECIPROCITY.

The consul of the United States at Lyons, France, in a recent letter to the state department, sets forth some of the obstructive results of the "protective" system, which the United States and France maintain against each other to their mutual and reciprocal disadvantage. Consul Peixotto sees the products of France excluded from our shores by heavy import duties, and on the other hand the products of our soil and manufactures kept out of the French market by hostile legislation of that country. He cannot see how this policy can be to the advantage of either, and he thinks that these two friendly nations ought to execute commercial treaties with each other, that the amicable feeling which exists between both populations may be cemented by the more substantial ties of commercial intercourse. Would not this be a rational policy? The consul enumerates articles which would develop "under a rational tariff" into a large trade. Cotton yarns spun in America are the best in the world, and therefore the best adapted to weaving with silk. Once admitted into France they would capture the market, and would soon grow into a trade of $25,000,000 a year. Outside of its great cities and important towns, France still depends upon candles for artificial light, and even where candles are not exclusively used, they are largely consumed. With the barrier of the tariff once removed, petroleum would enter as a large and growing item of trade, and with it the unequaled American lamps. French hardware is largely hand forged and is still primitive and clumsy; our axes, hatchets, hammers and tools in general are so light, elegant and superior that they would sweep the market if once introduced. Except perhaps Italy, France is the worst provided of all countries with apparatus for cooking and heating; twenty years have wrought such climatic changes, that her old title of "sunny land" can now be successfully disputed by the United States; hence there is a market for stoves, in which this country leads the world for variety and excellence. Spades, plows, rakes, hoes and agricultural tools generally, are wretchedly made in France, and American makes would be seized with avidity; but manufactures of wood, iron and steel are prohibited under the present tariff. So with boots and shoes, in which Massachusetts and Connecticut could secure a trade the extent of which they have no conception. Sheet and tube brass and goods made therefrom, furniture and household goods, cutlery, nails, paints, writing paper, carriages, textile machinery, and a large variety of miscellaneous goods for which there might be found a market in that country are named. Hence the consul renews his recommendation that congress be urged to revise the present tariff, imposing slight fiscal charges upon those countries which have commercial treaties with the United States, and laying prohibitive duties upon these other countries which seek to keep all the trade to themselves.

If the government would [illegible] the pay in all these positions till the incumbents thereof were placed, as they ought to be, on a level with persons in like positions in private business, the places would be much less sought after; and, as the scramble would diminish, half the evils of the spoils system would pass away at once.

"Inquirer" wishes to know whether "United States postage stamps have been purchased in large amounts at any time during the last six years for less than face value." Also whether houses in New York and elsewhere have sold these stamps and derived profits from the sale." Until recently village and country postmasters, that is to say, postmasters at offices where the business was small, were allowed a heavy percentage on the sale of stamps, as part of their emoluments. The consequence was that a very large amount of postage stamps got on the market and were sold at a discount. The country postmaster usually keeps a store. We have heard of instances in this state where merchants in Portland, having dealings with these country postmasters and storekeepers, would obtain considerable sums in stamps at rates which would enable them to sell the same in turn at a discount and yet make a profit. In course of time it was noticed that many of the small postoffices in all parts of the country were reporting largely increased sales of stamps, while no such increase was observed in the sales of the larger offices. This led to an inquiry, and the result was the discovery of a large leak in the postal revenues, which was stopped a year or so ago, if we remember correctly, by abolishing or reducing the commission on the sale of stamps at the smaller offices.

The barbed-wire monopoly is deemed by the farmers of Iowa and other prairie states as so great an outrage and oppression that they are organizing for a war upon it. By advancing the price of this fencing material the monopoly shows its determination to make the most out of it. The courts protect the monopoly, though it is shown that barbed-wire fence was used largely for years before any monopolist thought of getting out a patent on it. No inventive ingenuity was required for discovery of the idea of attaching barbs to wire to make a substantial and effective fence; and the sufferers from the spoliation which the patent laws enforce intend to go directly to congress to overthrow this iniquity. A Chicago paper says: "If they will unite for that purpose they may within the next two years have a congress an overwhelming majority of whose members will be pledged to the abolishment of that relic of barbarism, the patent system. Emancipation from the legalized robberies perpetrated under that abomination is an object for which the whole people have reason to pray. But prayer alone will not bring it; they must also work."

The specie movement during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1881, was unprecedented. The imports of gold and silver amounted to $110,600,000, against exports of $19,400,000, an excess of $91,200,000. The net import of gold and silver during 1880 reached $75,900,000. During the first seven years of the decade, beginning with 1870, the net export of specie averaged about $55,000,000 per annum. For the last five years the gold and silver movement shows an annual average net import of some $28,500,000.

The Georgia legislature, now in session, learning that Mormon missionaries are making remarkable progress in propagation of their doctrines in some of the counties of that state, is taking action against them. A bill has already passed the state senate which makes it a felony, punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labor, for any one to "attempt in a sermon, public address, or otherwise, to counsel, advise or encourage any violation of the laws forbidding bigamy or polygamy."

Professor T. M. Harris has an essay in the September North American on the relations of the church, the state and the schools. His main point is that the family, the church and the state each supplies an element of education; that these elements cannot be supplied by the schools; that no attempt should be made to supply them by the schools, and that it is foolish to object that these things are not supplied by them.

Estimates based on actual measurements from threshing-machines in Ohio submitted to the state board of agriculture show a heavy falling off in the yield of wheat as compared with 1880. The shortage is estimated at 28 per cent., or 38,000,000 bushels against 52,500,000 last year. Of corn there is an estimated reduction of 30 per cent., which would make 30,000,000 bushels less than last year.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I take great pleasure in informing you that I have opened the premises No. 193 First street (lately occupied by Mooney & Valentine) with an Extensive and Assorted Stock of BOOTS and SHOES, which I have had manufactured under my personal supervision by the best Eastern and California manufacturers. In entering this, our new field of enterprise, we are actuated by the three principles of a strictly legitimate business firm, it being our effort to remedy the evil effects of unreliable establishments and to guarantee the public

[illegible]—Thirty-[illegible] Harvey Brown [illegible] Portland and [illegible] at Astoria [illegible] satisfaction about [illegible] 20 years [illegible]

[illegible] PHEASANTS [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] recently returned from [illegible] the birds as doing well [illegible] Several of their [illegible] the harvest and carefully watched, and it was ascertained that a numerous [illegible] healthy brood of young ones was hatched. The only fears that are entertained, from their plain plumage, may be mistaken [illegible] for native pheasants and killed by some of our sportsmen; but if this can be avoided for a few years the breed will be thoroughly established here.

NUMBER OF ARRESTS.—One hundred and seventy-three arrests were made by the police during the month, classified as follows: Drunk and disorderly, [illegible]; abusive language, 9; assault and battery, [illegible]; disorderly by fighting, 13; contempt of court, 1; assault with a dangerous weapon, 2; escaped prisoners, [illegible]; enroute to the penitentiary, 4; carrying concealed weapons, 1; larceny, 4; en route to the insane asylum, 1; larceny by bailee, 1; discharging firearms within the city limits, 3; fast driving, 2, soliciting without a license, 1; insane, 1, seduction, 1.

FOOT CUT.—An old man named Robert Christian, living on Lake river, Washington territory, while splitting wood yesterday morning, met with a very serious accident. The ax glanced and striking his foot nearly severed the member. The hemorrhage was very profuse, but the flow of blood was at length stanched. Mr. Christian was brought to this city and taken to the residence of Mr. Hathaway. Dr. Saylor was called and dressed the wounded limb.

NEW LAW FIRM.—Mr. W. S. Newbury, of the late firm of Newbury, Hawthorne & Co., has retired from the mercantile walks of life, and having associated himself with Mr. W. H. Grant, late of Woodland, California, will resume the practice of law. Mr. Newbury is a well known resident of the city, and together with his partner, who comes well recommended, the new firm will no doubt share well in the patronage of all who are unfortunate enough to have to resort to legal assistance.

THE SUCCESSFUL APPLICANT.—Last night the board by whom examinations for the cadetship were held, concluded their labors and selected Edward C. Brooks, of Linkville, as best fitted for the place, Harvey S. Jordan, of Molalla, Clackamas county, was selected as alternate. All the young men passed very creditable examinations. The successful applicant is a son of Mr. Quincy A. Brooks.

PRISONER HELD.—Hon. Elwood Evans, of New Tacoma, telegraphed yesterday to Chief Luttrell instructing him to hold Robert Sullivan, who was arrested in this city Tuesday evening until a requisition could be obtained from the governor of that territory. No officer arrived from Seattle last evening to take the prisoner back. An officer will probably arrive this evening.

FOR HONOLULU.—Owing to delay of English mails the Zealandia, in which Rev. J. A. Cruzan and wife sailed for Honolulu, did not leave San Francisco until August 29th. Such is the arrangement of steamers from Honolulu that Mr. Cruzan will be compelled to remain seven weeks on the islands, and consequently will not return to Portland until about November 1st.

FINALLY SETTLED.—It is reported on what appears to be entirely good authority that the terms of lease of the narrow-gauge lines to the Villard party have been finally settled, and that the lease was finally consummated yesterday in New York. It had been reported for several days that this contract was off, but the contrary result is now understood to have been reached.

LEFT OR OBSERVATION.—Gov. W. A. Newell, of Washington territory, will leave this morning for a trip up the Columbia. He goes on a tour of observation and will be absent about two weeks. Gov. Newell will visit Walla Walla, Waitsburg, Dayton, Lewiston, Pomeroy, Colfax, Spokan Falls and other immediate points.

UNDER BONDS.—Miss Kitty Boyce was arrested yesterday and brought before Justice Bybee on a charge of keeping a house of ill repute. The testimony being deemed sufficient, the defendant was held to await the action of the grand jury. Her bonds were fixed at $300, which were readily furnished.

CLEARING THE WAY.—The work of clearing the way for the O. R. & N. Co's railroad is being pushed rapidly forward. Different gangs of men are at work, one of which is now inside the city limits of East Portland, working down Sullivan's gulch toward the river.

WEEKLY PRAYER MEETING.—The prayer meeting this evening will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock at the Taylor Street M. E. Church. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of the church. A full attendance of the members is especially requested.

LINE DOWN.—The line was down yesterday all day below Kalama. For that reason nothing was heard of the steamship Columbia until after she passed Kalama. It is not known what time the "State" reached Astoria and when she crossed to sea.

FIXING UP.—Front street, between F and G, is now being raised to correspond with the new grade of the street north and south. The O. & C. R. R. are now engaged on a new incline to the ferry to reach the higher grade.

FIRST QUARTERLY MEETING.—Rev. A. C. Fairchild, presiding elder, will hold his first quarterly meeting of the year at Oregon City next Sabbath, and the second at Hall street the Sabbath following.

REGULAR TRIPS.—For the past few days the Jefferson street ferry has been undergoing sundry needed repairs. The boat commenced to make regular trips Tuesday afternoon.

SCHOOLHOUSE.—To-day work will commence on the schoolhouse in Holladay's addition to East Portland. The work will be crowded forward to an early completion.

THE LAST TRIP.—Neither the Hayward nor the Smith will go through to the seaside or Ilwaco this season, both boats having made their last trips thither.

STEAMER ARRIVED.—The steamship Columbia arrived here last evening at 10 o'clock with freight and passengers.

AUCTION SALES.

A. B. Richardson will hold a very large [illegible] sale this day at No. 160, Clay street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. Sale at 10 A. M.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

The Northwestern hotel at Dayton, Washington Territory, recently erected and newly furnished, is worthy the patronage of the traveling public. The advertisement gives further information.

Good work, reasonable prices and fair dealing are [illegible]. This explains why it is that Davidson, photographer in this city, enjoys a photo trade that requires a larger force of skilled workmen than is kept by any other artist in Oregon. [illegible] has taken seven persons besides himself to [illegible] the business, viz: operator, retoucher, printer, crew artist, colorist, operator with branch gallery and special agent taking orders for [illegible] and water color work. Facts are those [illegible] louder than expensive displays, which the customers have to pay for.

BRIEF NOTES.

Vacation is over.

August has dusted.

The seaside is being deserted.

Studies will be resumed in the public schools to-day.

Work on the Baptist church is being pushed rapidly forward.

The schoolmarms have returned from valley, mountain and sea, and are at their respective posts of duty.

Mr. Jacob Hunsaker, one of the substantial, old Pioneer citizens of Clackamas county, has become a resident of East Portland.

The wife of Mr. George Perry, a very estimable lady, is very ill, and but little hope of recovery is entertained on the part of friends or physicians.

Prof. [illegible] Parrott and son have returned from a hunt trip in Yamhill county. They made a successful raid, and returned home with their game bags full of vegetables.

MAT KEITH THE CATERER.

Epicures have not forgotten the circumstance that [illegible] has arrived; that in the orthography of that month an "R" occurs; and that it signifies that the regular oyster season is at hand. Lovers of the delicate bivalve do know just where to go to obtain a rich fry, an elegant pan roast, a choice and tempting dish of raw, or a delicious stew. They never make a mistake. They always go to Mat Keith's, at his old and ever popular resort, at the corner of First and Oak. There is a good reason for this choice of the public. Mat is a thorough oyster artist. He is acknowledged to be the most scientific caterer in the business line in the city. Those who visit his fashionable place always call again. Last evening the [illegible] brought Keith a large and splendid invoice of fine eastern oysters. These will be served in every desirable style to customers. He is also in daily receipt of fresh Olympia oysters. No one can [illegible] to voted the best caterer.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Matinee "Ingomar" was presented yesterday afternoon at the theater to a large audience. The piece was mounted in splendid style and was produced in excellent manner. The support was unusually prompt and effective—even to the more subordinate characters. As the rough and rugged barbarian Mr. Sheridan appeared to his best advantage, his commanding figure, graceful acting and rich voice, adding enthusiastic interest to the impersonation. Miss Keene richly merited the hearty and frequent applause bestowed. She played "Parthenia" with a sweet and womanly grace which was natural and charming.

PERSONAL.

Judge J. F. Watson, of Roseburg, is registered at the St. Charles Hotel.

Mrs. T. H. Crawford, who has been seriously ill with hemorrhage of the lungs has so far recovered as to be able to ride out.

Mrs. A. S. Duniway returned Monday evening from Ilwaco. She reports an enjoyable season of rest and recreation and has laid the foundation for future seasons of summering by the purchase of building lots at this favorite resort.

Description of the Apparatus and Boats at Cape Hancock—How Persons are Rescued from Stranded Vessels, etc.

"Make her [illegible]

[illegible] The boat weighs about three [illegible] pounds. The boat weighs about three [illegible] and is self-bailing, having six check valves in her deck. She has a rudder and two sweeps and two French lug sails. It is next to impossible to capsize [illegible], and should she do she will right herself in sixteen seconds. The last two boats described are hung in buildings directly over the water in Baker's bay, with no floor under the boats. The larger of the two has been manned and lowered in three minutes.

The "season" for service extends from November to May. The crew is made up principally from fishermen, who work during the summer on the bay. Their wages are $40 per month, but as they have ample opportunity for making nets when not employed in drilling, the pay is quite satisfactory. Rules require drills to be held at least twice a month. Last winter Captain Harris had his men out twice a week. A watch is constantly kept at the lighthouse, less than a quarter of a mile distant. There being no appropriation for a paid crew in summer, volunteers must be depended on, and it is thought enough hands can be secured among the fishermen in the immediate vicinity to render all necessary assistance. Fortunately there has been no opportunity yet to demonstrate, in a practical way, the utility of the service.

In the August number of the Contemporary, Mr. J. M. Farrar reviews Mr. Jefferson Davis' "Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government" in a remarkable article. A sufficient idea of its quality and impartiality will be conveyed in the statement that he regards Antietam and Gettysburg as southern victories.

According to the New York correspondents, ex-Lord Roscoe personally claims to have a heart bowed down with weight of woe at the president's danger, the while urging Arthur to attempt to usurp the president's position. There's much inconsistency in stalwart newspaper lying concealed in Roscoe's neighborhood.

Another, and what is claimed to be the true source of the Mississippi river, was recently discovered by Captain Glazier. It is a beautiful little lake of sparkling water, located three-quarters of a mile above Lake Itaska, with which it is connected by a rapid stream. It has been named Lake Glazier in honor of the discoverer.

The colored population of Virginia is 629,000 by the last census against 882,730 whites. A good many white men in Virginia are republicans, and it is only by the systematic disfranchisement of the blacks that the Bourbons have been able to control the state. The Mahone readjusters number perhaps 40,000 white votes. If the blacks vote with them the [illegible] ticket will defeat the Bourbons and be triumphantly elected.

NELLIE HAZELTINE'S MASH.

[illegible] Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

St. Louis, Aug. 30. This afternoon the [illegible] is bringing to light a scandal which involves [illegible] of Nellie Hazeltine, the reigning belle of St. Louis, whose name a year ago was mentioned in connection with that of Samuel J. Tilden, it being reported that she was engaged to marry him. The gentleman in the present case is John Amweg, a blonde, with a fair voice, fine eyes and a good leg. He has held subsidiary positions in the Ford opera company for some time past, and this is probably the first time his name has appeared prominently in the newspapers. It appears, according to his story, that three weeks ago a young lady of great beauty occupied the front seat at the Uhrig's Cave theatre, and seemed only to take an interest in the proceedings when he was on the stage. She looked at him fixedly and smilingly, he says, until his attention was drawn to her, and one evening she took the bouquet from her breast, kissed it, and by moving it about pinned his attention to it. Then with a smile she placed it under the seat upon which she was sitting. As soon as the curtain dropped, Amweg hastened to the place and secured the flowers, among which there was a note, and then asked a friend who the lady was. "Miss Nellie Hazeltine," was the reply. "And who is she?" "The belle of St. Louis." An interview was arranged, in the course of which, Amweg said, the lady told him she had received ninety offers of marriage, one of them from an old man in New York worth $15,000,000; that he was a democrat (meaning Tilden) and that she was a democrat, but that she could not marry where she did not love. He says she went on to tell him that he (Amweg) was the only one who had touched her heart.

Amweg said that he replied that he had not $5 in the world, and that he would just as soon settle in St. Louis as anywhere. Several notes, he alleges, passed between them, and two photographs, upon the back of one of which was written, "Yours until death do us part. Nellie." Naturally all this good fortune, real or alleged, turned Amweg's head, and he confided the matter to two or three dozen friends, besides writing home to his mother that he was going to get married and sending her one of the letters which he claims to have received. Of course the story spread. Last Monday night Miss Hazeltine and her mother left for the White Sulphur Springs in Virginia, where they now are. At this point Amweg may be left for a little while, and the attention of the reader concentrated on Miss Hazeltine's brother and Mr. Fred Paramore, who, it was explained, has a right to act in the premises. These two gentlemen heard the stories afloat, and concluded that the proper course to pursue was to punch Amweg's eye, and for this purpose that sweet singer was yesterday afternoon beguiled up into Mr. Paramore's office on the fourth floor of the building on the southeast corner of Fourth and Pine streets. Mr. Hazeltine had asked a Mr. Linn to be present as Amweg's friend to see fair play. As soon as the party gathered Mr. Hazeltine asked Mr. Amweg if he had said he was going to marry his sister. Mr. Amweg replied that that was his intention. Mr. Hazeltine then struck Amweg with his fist, which was returned, and the two parties caught each other by the hair and swung round and round as though practicing a newfangled German. Mr. Paramore in the meantime produced a cowhide, which he had bought for the occasion, and was waiting for somebody's pants to get tight so that he could have a little of the pie himself, when he was collared by Mr. Linn, who remarked that one at a time was enough for Amweg. Of course Paramore resented this interference, and for a time there was a double shuffle, in which much hair, many collar buttons and considerable temper was lost. When everybody was tired of the circus they all drew off and began to discuss the matter. "You know you must be mistaken," said Will Hazeltine. "You may be honest in what you believe, but my sister could not have written you any letters." "But I've got the letters." "Where?" "Out at my house." He was compelled to give Hazeltine a written order to search through his trunks, and that young gentleman soon returned looking very much annoyed, and bringing two letters and two photographs, all of which were promptly confiscated. The young lady's friends still declare that there was some mistake; that Amweg had been imposed upon by one of Hazeltine's servants, and he was asked to come out to the house and see if he could identify one of the girls there. On the way out Hazeltine asked him to describe the position of the furniture in the parlor if he had really been there, and he did it very correctly. At the house Hazeltine summoned one of the servants, a very pretty laundress, up stairs, and asked Amweg if that was not the girl he had met. "No," he replied, "it was Miss Nellie Hazeltine that I met—she whose photograph you have there!" No amount of questioning, no threats could turn him from his story, and the idea was at last abandoned. The party broke up on the Hazeltine doorstep. All four of the gentlemen were pretty badly rumpled up from the fuss at Paramore's office, Amweg being especially beaten up about the head and face, so that he could not appear upon the stage last night. To-day he says he will begin two suits against Will Hazeltine and Fred Paramore—one for assault with intent to kill, and the other for civil damages. The case is more than a cause celebre. Amweg belongs to a highly respectable Philadelphia family, and his father is a well-known lawyer there. His brother holds a very responsible position with the Pennsylvania railroad, being inspector of bridges on that line. For three years young Amweg has been on the stage, having first been connected with Frank Mayo, playing a minor part in "Davy Crockett." Since then he has been singing in the chorus of Ford's Opera Company, and has been connected with the various "Pinafore," "Fatinitza," "Boccaccio," "Billee Taylor," and "Olivette" productions. He is a tenor and makes up well on the stage, having the foundation or framework for a good physique, which will fill in with time. His folks have long urged him to leave the mimic stage, and it has been against their wishes that he has continued the business.

Breakfast—What to have and how to serve it.

In France the first breakfast consists simply of a cup of coffee and a roll, while in England it is a hearty meal composed of various substantial dishes, both hot and cold, of which the members of the family partake at their convenience, instead of assembling at a stated hour. Our busy American life seems to demand something more substantial than the one, and more prompt and regular than the other, and American breakfasts are made a special feature at some of the French restaurants. The housekeeper should study variety in the breakfasts she offers her family, not only from day to day, but changing them as much as possible with the seasons. The things which are most suggestive on a cold winter's morning are by no means tempting in July, when we need not only lighter clothing but lighter food. Too often the meal loses all character in a continual round of steak and chops the year through, and [illegible] dishes [illegible] less expensive [illegible]. Cold [illegible] or chicken can be easily made into croquettes, or minced and well seasoned and served on slices of water toast. Eggs can be [illegible] in a variety of ways that we need never tire of them, and the same may be said of potatoes. In their season, tomatoes sliced and served with Mayonnaise dressing, or a simple dressing of oil and vinegar, are very nice for breakfast. There is no more wholesome or tempting addition to the morning meal than fruit served as a first course. Oatmeal porridge, [illegible] so healthful an article of food, that it should be used universally.

If it is necessary, in order to economize time in the morning, to set the breakfast table the night before, it should be carefully covered with an old linen tablecloth or something [illegible] kept for the purpose. The tea or coffee service should be placed at [illegible] end of the table [illegible] and it is [illegible] to stand them on a tray. [illegible]

English and American English.

What I Englishmen never say [illegible] with [illegible] It is not at all [illegible] the Englishman as freely [illegible] the expression [illegible] as perhaps more modest. Yet on the other side, it may be noted, that the [illegible] American often uses the expression "I want to know" in in the same sense as our [illegible] expression of attentive interest, "indeed!"

Among other familiar Americanisms may be mentioned the following:

An American who is interested in a narrative or statement will say, "Is that so?" or simply "So?" The expression "Possible?" is sometimes but not often heard. Dickens misunderstood this exclamation as equivalent to "It is possible, but does not concern me"; whereas in reality it is equivalent to the expression "Is it possible?" I have occasionally heard the expression "Do tell!" but it is less frequently heard now than of yore.

The word "right" is more frequently used than in England, and is used also in senses different from those understood in our English usage of the word. Thus, the American will say "right here" and "right there," where an Englishman would say "just here" or "just there," or simply "here" or "there." Americans say "right away" where we say "directly." On the other hand, I am inclined to think that the English expression "right well" for "very well" is not commonly used in America.

Americans say "yes, sir," and "no, sir," with a sense different from that with which the words are used in England; but they mark the difference of sense by a difference of intonation. Thus, if a question is asked to which the reply in England would be simply "yes" or "no," or, according to the rank or station of the querist, "yes, sir," or "no, sir," the American reply would be "yes, sir," or "no, sir," intonated as with us in England. But if the reply is intended to be emphatic, then the intonation is such as to throw the emphasis on the word "sir"—the reply is "yes, sir," or "no, sir." In passing, I may note that I have never heard an American waiter reply "yes, sir," as our English waiters do.

The American use of the word "quit" is peculiar. They do not limit the word, as we do, to the signification "take leave"—in fact, I have never heard an American use the word in that sense. They generally use it as an equivalent to "leave off" or "stop." (In passing, one may notice as rather strange the circumstance that the word "quit," which properly means "to go away from," and the word "stop," which means "to stay," should both have come to be used as signifying "to leave off.") Thus Americans say, "quit fooling" for, "leave off playing the fool," "quit singing," "quit laughing," etc.

To English ears an American use of the word "some" sounds strange, viz., as an adverb. An American will say, "I think some of buying a new house," or the like, "for I have some idea of buying," etc. I have indeed heard the usage defended as perfectly correct, though assuredly there is not an instance in all the wide range of English literature which will justify it.

So, also, many Americans defend as good English the use of the word "good" in such phrases as the following: "I have written that note good," for "well;" "that will make you feel good," for "that will do you good;" and in other ways all equally incorrect. Of course there are instances in which adjectives are allowed by custom to be used as verbs, as, for instance, "right" for "rightly," etc., but there can be no reason for substituting the adjective "good" in place of the adverb "well," which is as short a word, and at least equally euphonious. The use of "real" for "really" as "real angry," "real nice," is, of course, grammatically indefensible.

The use of the word "elegant" for "fine" strikes English ears as strange. For instance, if you say to an American, "This is a fine morning," he is likely to reply, "It is an elegant morning," or perhaps oftener by using simply the word "Elegant." It is not a pleasing use of the word.

There are some Americanisms which seem more than defensible—in fact, grammatically more correct than our English usage. Thus, we seldom hear in America the redundant word "got" in such expressions as "I have got," etc., etc. Where the word would not be redundant, it is yet generally replaced by the more euphonious word "gotten," now scarcely ever heard in England. Yet again, we often hear in America such expressions as "I shall get me a new book," "I have gotten me a dress," "I must buy me that," and the like. This use of "me" for "myself" is good old English, at any rate.

I have been struck by the circumstance that neither the conventional, but generally very absurd, American of our English novelists, nor the conventional, but at least equally absurd, Englishman of American novelists, is made to employ the more delicate Americanisms or Anglicisms. We generally find the American "guessing" or "calculating" if not even more coarsely Yankee, like Reade's Joshua Fullalove, while the Englishman of American novels is almost always very coarsely British, even if he is not represented as using what Americans persist in regarding as the true "Henglish haccent." Where an American is less coarsely drawn, as Trollope's "American Senator," he uses expressions which no American ever uses, and none of those Americanisms which, while more delicate, are in reality more characteristic, because they are common, all Americans using them. And in like manner, when an American writer introduces an Englishman of the more natural sort he never makes him speak as an Englishman would speak; before half a dozen sentences have been uttered he uses some expression which is purely American. This an Englishman ever uses and no American may be recognized at once by using such expressions as "I know it" or "That's so," for "It is true," by saying "Why, certainly," for "certainly," and so forth. There are a great number of these slight but characteristic peculiarities of American and English English.
